that some priorities regarding the proposed capacity building in Korea, informed delegates that while this Group had discussed all of the proposed priorities and that their representative would present a report to the Regional Group had discussed all of the proposed priorities and that their suggested modifications had been transmitted to the Secretariat. Vice-President for Latin America and the Caribbean, Brazil, noted that this Group had discussed all issues and priorities and that their report will be sent to the Secretariat. Vice-President for WEOG, the US, stated that this Group had provided a relatively extensive written report with proposed changes to the Secretariat that would be transmitted to the ad hoc working group.

Chair Hickman thanked the Vice-Presidents and NGO representatives for their comments and he charged delegates to think in a focused manner and create a text that is acceptable to all.

Chair Hickman briefly returned to this agenda item to note that the Forum Standing Committee (FSC) had discussed changes to FSC membership and recommended that its composition be amended so that each regional group, except Western Europe and Others (WEOG), be assigned one additional member. He noted that this would increase FSC membership from 21 to 25, and stated his belief that the advantages of greater participation will outweigh the increase in size. Plenary approved this amendment.

The message highlighted the major contribution made by the IFCS to international cooperation and invited IFCS input into the preparations for the Rio+10 meeting in 2002.

PRIORITIES FOR ACTION BEYOND 2000: Chair Hickman noted the establishment of an ad hoc working group on Priorities for Action Beyond 2000, with Chair Maria Cristina Cardenas Fischer (Sweden) and Rapporteur Gunnar Bengtsson (Sweden). He noted that this open group would need to conclude its work for presentation to Plenary on Thursday. He then asked the IFCS regional Vice-Presidents and NGO representatives to report on progress.

Chair Hickman reminded the delegates that the ad hoc working group was established during 2000 and that their suggested modifications had been transmitted to the Secretariat. Vice-President for Latin America and the Caribbean, Brazil, noted that this Group had discussed all issues and priorities and that their report will be sent to the Secretariat. Vice-President for WEOG, the US, stated that this Group had provided a relatively extensive written report with proposed changes to the Secretariat that would be transmitted to the ad hoc working group.

Pesticides Action Network (PAN), on behalf of public interest NGOs, proposed that health and environmental protection be the primary objective of IFCS work and the framework for the details under discussion. ICEM, on behalf of labor NGOs, noted that they would be tabling written suggestions on this subject. ICCA, on behalf of industry NGOs, noted that the FSC guidelines for proposing priorities should be taken into account. These guidelines note that priorities should be, inter alia: realistic yet challenging, and suitable for implementation.

Chair Hickman drew participants’ attention to the fact that the FSC working group-prepared document Prevention of Illegal International Traffic in Toxic and Dangerous Products (IFCS/ FORUMIII/10w) and introduced working group Co-chair and session facilitator Fatoumata Jallow Ndoye (The Gambia). Facilitator Ndoye stressed that the problem applies to all regions and that illegal entry into territories can occur if adequate measures are not in place. She asked: what are the consequences of such entries; who are the culprits; what is the international community’s role; what is the dimension of the problem; what work has been done; and what is the way forward. She highlighted Chapter 19’s objectives relating to illegal traffic and the session objective of undertaking a programme of action to address these objectives.

value. Regarding Basel, he identified a July 1999 UNEP workshop addressing compliance and enforcement and the UNEP standing working group on compliance and enforcement in multilateral environmental agreements (MEAs). Willis anticipated the operation of Article 17 of the Rotterdam PIC Convention in 2002, addressing compliance issues, upon the attainment of 50 ratifications to that convention. He highlighted incidents during recent PIC deliberations that indicate the ongoing salience of the issue, including statements at PIC INC-6 indicating that the issue should be on the FORUM III agenda and the intention to revisit the issue at the upcoming INC-7.

Ibrahim Sow, African Region, stressed the lack of management capacity in the region and identified legal instruments in place to tackle the issue. He noted Africa’s belief in addressing the problem regionally and stressed Africa’s high exposure to the problem ten years ago due to the absence of legal tools. Questioning why illegal traffic occurs, Sow identified: internal limits, including delays in implementing legislation and a lack of synergy between actors; and external limits, including lack of coordination and understanding of relevant conventions. Sow identified related MEAs and stressed their implementation. He also highlighted relevant African conventions, including the Bamako Convention, and noted different actors at the national level and the importance of coordination. Briefly identifying examples, Sow cited, inter alia, an instance relating to unused pesticides that resulted in disposal problems. He stressed a lack of expertise in ascertaining toxicity levels and lack of control at the borders. Sow also briefly identified measures in place.

Pakdee Pothisiri, Asia-Pacific Region, noted that although there is little data about illegal trafficking in Asia, many cases are covered by the media and NGOs. He identified common methods of illegal traffic, including lack of knowledge and misleading labeling. He stated that the problems must be solved through sustainable prevention, and that Programme Area F targets are meaningless unless they lead to measures at the international level. He called for: strengthening of mechanisms for compliance and enforcement of national laws; and increasing participation in international initiatives, such as the Basel and Rotterdam Conventions.

Jacqueline Alvarez, Latin American and Caribbean Region, emphasized the importance of prevention and detection. She highlighted seven recommendations, including: links to international agencies; involvement of the World Customs Organization toward more precise control of products; disclosure of national decisions to the international community; increased support mechanisms and technical assistance for countries that produce and export chemicals; increased regional cooperation and mechanisms; strengthening of legal frameworks and training; and links between governments and regional cooperation structures.

Jana Kovacicova, Central and Eastern European Region, noted issues pertinent to that region, such as: changing and destabilized economic structures; inadequate international coordination between countries with respect to adoption of legal instruments; and low public awareness of environmental and health problems. Recommendations from the Group called for, inter alia: programmes to detect target organizations involved in illegal trafficking: implementation of the Rotterdam PIC Convention; efficient cooperation among border control agencies; and comprehensive evaluation of Programme Area F.

Michael Penders, WEOG, emphasized the importance of technological methods for tracking hazardous chemicals. He noted that, in general, customs inspectors less than one per cent of incoming shipments, and less than that for outgoing shipments. He highlighted successful international partnerships toward reducing illegal trafficking, and reiterated the importance of integrating customs data with environmental compliance data.

Delegates then commented on the paper, Prevention of Illegal International Traffic in Toxic and Dangerous Products (IFCS/ FORUMII/10w). BELARUS suggested that links should be made with IGOs such as the International Atomic Energy Agency, which have sufficient experience in addressing illegal traffic. GERMANY proposed the FORUM consider initiating a working group on illegal traffic with IOMC and the IFCS, pointing out that POPs negotiations started in the same manner. NIGERIA pointed out that the Rotterdam PIC Convention, even when it comes into force, will not protect developing countries and countries with economies in transition from illegal traffic. SWEDEN said that a good role for the FORUM would be to direct the overall international agenda on chemical issues, without getting involved in activities that would be financially burdensome.

BELGIUM noted that despite the positive uses of the Internet, in some instances it can be a means of illegal traffic. The EUROPEAN COMMISSION suggested cooperation with international customs organizations, especially regarding harmonized codes for chemicals. The REPUBLIC OF KOREA highlighted recommendations from his region, such as using case studies and implementing FORUM Priorities for Action. THAILAND emphasized the importance of differentiating between chemicals and hazardous wastes, and noted that illegal trafficking is a lucrative business. The US summarized recommendations from WEOG, including the involvement of the World Customs Organization and looking to UNEP for IFCS financing.

IN THE CORRIDORS

Divergent opinions materialized Tuesday regarding the extent to which the IFCS should concretely address the illegal traffic of chemicals. Some delegates expressed support for a strong IFCS voice on this topic, citing Programme Area F of Chapter 19 as a mandate for this. Others intimated that existing instruments, such as the Basel Convention, the Rotterdam Convention and the soon-to-be-completed POPs convention, were better placed and funded to regulate illegal traffic.

Additionally, the proliferation of working groups suggested to at least one observer that below the seemingly unhurried surface of the meeting, the pace of FORUM III was picking up with a view to producing concrete results by the week’s end. There were also murmurs of intense debates regarding the location of FORUM IV.
